Disease: Dermatofibroma

Confidence: 65.54%

Explanation: Dermatofibroma is commonly a small, firm, benign skin nodule that may appear pink, brown, or reddish-brown. It is often linked to minor skin injury, insect bites, or irritation. It may feel hard and can dimple inward when gently pinched.

Solution: Most dermatofibromas only need observation. Avoid scratching or repeated friction. See a clinician if the nodule enlarges rapidly, becomes painful, bleeds, changes color, or if the diagnosis is uncertain.
